

Sipping Paul Henry's second vintage pinot noir for Invivo. After a surprisingly popular first release (8000 bottles sold out in a week last year) around 24,000 bottles – bearing the broadcaster's face – of the wine have been produced. Henry's own humble description: "My last wine was world class but I wanted more Paul Henry in this wine, and it doesn't disappoint... You could be filing for bankruptcy and if you had a glass of this wine in your hand, you'd have to pause and think that life's not too bad." We'd say it's smooth, rich and a popular choice if you've got guests. Available from Glengarry, RRP $30.
